Glenn Mann, a cherished husband, father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, passed away surrounded by his loving family, leaving behind a legacy of courage, love, and an unwavering dedication to his family and community. Born to the late Jessie Howard Mann and Ollie Mae Mann, Glenn was a beacon of strength and handiness, always ready to lend a helping hand or share a word of encouragement.

Glenn's culinary skills shone during family gatherings, where he loved to cook on the grill or host a fish fry, creating memories that his family will treasure forever.

Family beach trips were among Glenn's favorite times, as they combined his love for family with the serenity of the ocean. His love for animals was just as strong, especially for his dogs, which he trained with patience and affection. Glenn was the epitome of a family man, always putting his loved ones first and ensuring they felt his love and support in all their endeavors.

Glenn Hutchinson posted:

I have over 70 years of memories and Glenn Mann shared many of them; We were friends, brothers-in-law and then just friends again! We hunted and shot guns a lot back in the day, before life got in the way! I don't know any magic words that can take away the pain and grief of losing your dad. I do know that when grief tries to get the upper hand on my heart I talk to Jesus and ask him to give Carolyn a hug and tell her that I'll be there as soon as the lord will allow!
