She was the daughter of the late John Clay Chapman and Elizabeth Chapman, whose values and love shaped Rosalee into the extraordinary woman she was.

In her younger years, Rosalee's adventurous spirit found joy in water skiing. As time went on, she found tranquility in quieter pursuits such as reading, cross-stitch, and needlework, through which she expressed her creativity.

Above all, Rosalee was an amazing caregiver, a role she embraced wholeheartedly throughout her life. She cared for everyone in her family with a selfless heart, always placing the needs of others before her own. Her love for her grandchildren was boundless, and she took great pride in their every achievement and milestone.
